

Practical Talk ON BUSINESS BY E. ST. ELMO LEWIS

National Authority on Business
Gives Excellent Advice to
Erie Board of Commerce

Secretary Bodine of Chamber of Commerce Receives Extensive From Address Which May Be of Value to Clearfield Business Men.

The following is an extract of an address delivered by E. St. Elmo Lewis before the Erie Board of Commerce and which was sent to Mr. Bodine, Secretary of the Clearfield Chamber of Commerce by Mr. Lewis. Mr. Lewis is a national authority on advertising, salesmanship, and credits and a much quoted author on business subjects. In this address he presented many practical pointers which may be of some special benefit to the business men of Clearfield as ideas containing much good common sense.

"I hear among you gentlemen once in a while, the suggestion that we ought to buy all our goods in Erie. That is a good idea. I thoroughly approve of it, but I approve of it only in the sense that I approve of the idea that must be back of any such campaign, and that is the realities of the city.

"First—Have advertised in such an attractive and human way that everybody in the city knows what goods they have for sale.

Get Ready for Trade
"Second—That they have dressed their windows so attractively, kept them so clean, and had such suggestive arrangement that everybody who saw them, noticed them and wanted to go inside to see the goods.

"Third—That they have such well-lighted stores and goods so well displayed that it was interesting to go inside the stores and look at the goods there.

"Fourth—That they have such well-trained, courteous and attentive clerks behind the counters, that the man or woman entering the store was given such attentive and kindly treatment that it was a pleasure to do business in that store.

Proper Buying
"Fifth—That the proprietor of the store went so often to the main markets, and so carefully selected the goods and priced them, that when he came back here everybody who saw them admitted that they were the best goods for the money that they could get anywhere.

"Sixth—That the proprietor himself had such a command of all the details of his business, that he got his bills out when they should be sent, that they were accurate, and that he had plain, straight-forward dealings with his customers, so that they knew exactly what they were expecting to get and got what they expected.

"I tell you, gentlemen, when you have a retail community dominated with such principles, you don't have any trouble about keeping the people at home. It is only when you have a community that doesn't know what you have for sale, that enters the store and receives discourteous, inattentive treatment, that sees seconds and thirds displayed on the counter, that has to take a piece of goods to the front door to get enough light to find out what it is like, that has to look through dirty and grimy windows at the goods—then you have no business going to more attractive centers to a business."

TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN
Winning a Man, Jan. 28.—(By United Press.) Dips and wets were today in the midst of the campaign preceding the vote to be taken on prohibition in Manitoba, at a general election, March 10th.

STATION AGENTS OF B. & P. RAILWAY HOLD MEETING

Matters Pertaining to Claims, Explosives and Agent's Work Discussed

The station agents of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railway held their regular bi-monthly meeting at East Salamanca, N. Y., on January 26th, where matters pertaining to claims, handling of explosives, and agent's work in general were taken up.

These meetings were held at different points on the line and are in accordance with the policy of the company in familiarizing agents with conditions at other stations; and also to give them an insight into the way other agents conduct their work. At each meeting certain agents deliver papers on subjects of which have been assigned, relative to different phases of the station agent's work. At the completion of the reading of the papers, the subject is open to discussion of all present.

Similar meetings are held in the engineering, stores and mechanical departments and are conducted in much the same manner. These meetings were started nearly two years ago and it is believed that they are productive of much good.

ALBANIA WITH EXCEPTION OF PORT EVACUATED BY ALLIES

Valona Battle Expected to be The Most Important of War

BY HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rome, Jan. 28.—Albania with the exception of the port of Valona and the immediate hinterland is being evacuated by the Allies. Italian forces hold strongly fortified positions at Valona. Heavy Austrian and Bulgarian detachments are closing in upon the seaport from the north and east. They are meeting with little resistance.

Official dispatches received here today indicated that the attack on Valona and one of the most important battles of the Balkan struggle, may begin within a fortnight. The Austrian fleet in all probability will attempt to participate in the engagement by shelling Valona from the Adriatic. In this event an encounter with the allies' squadron is certain to bring perhaps the greatest naval fight of the war. Conquest of Montenegro an dthe capture of the Albanian town of Scutari and San Giovanni Di Medua by the Austrians made further resistance by scattered Serbian forces in northern Albania useless.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ATTENDS REVIVAL LAST EVENING

Rev. O. B. Poulson Preaches a Fine Sermon to the Epworth League

A large number of young people of the Epworth League and their friends gathered last night at the Trinity Methodist church to hear Rev. O. B. Poulson speak at the evangelistic meetings he is holding. The League entered the auditorium singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Mr. Knight conducted a spirited song service and E. V. Brown, president of the League led in prayer. The young people's choir then sang two beautiful selections, "The Touch of His Hand on Mine," and "Crown Him."

Mr. Poulson said in his presentation of his theme. His text was taken from John 17:19. "For their sakes, I sanctify myself." His story abounds with examples to illustrate this theme. In July 1914, little Belgium set herself to the task of keeping war-like Germany from sweeping down upon France and taking by recognition they mean the establishing of a system for collection of the union dues through the company offices then the miners are certain to be fought to the last ditch by the operators.

It is pretty safe to say that the operators will not accede to all of the demands of the miners. The most of the operators want that a fair increase in wages can not be denied the men. Some of them are not willing to grant to relate, forty one young people came forward to the altar surrendering themselves to God's will concerning them.

As a further expression of regret the Swiss federal council has decided to send the chief of its political department to the German ambassador at Bern to offer an apology.

ANTHRACITE WAGES TO BE SETTLED BY JOINT COMMITTEE

Mine Workers Will Make Hard Fight For Concessions From The Operators

Miner-Union Today Numerically and Financially Stronger Than Ever—Miners Have Already Formulated Demands.

New York, Jan. 28.—Two weeks from today the anthracite operators and miners will begin a joint conference in this city in an endeavor to agree upon a new scale of wages and working conditions to come into effect on April 1, when the present agreement will expire. With the approach of the date for the conference, considerable curiosity is evinced, especially in the mining region itself, as to what steps the two contending parties will take. The relations between employers and employees have been governed for nearly fourteen years by the award of the commission which the President of the United States appointed to settle the strike of 1902. The award was for a term of three years only, but it was renewed in 1906, (after a six weeks' suspension) and again in 1909 and 1912.

The probabilities are that the United Mine Workers of America will make the fight of its life for concessions that have been denied in the last 15 years. The miners' union is today numerically and financially stronger than it has ever been in its history, and mine workers and their leaders feel that if the dreams of unionism are to be realized in the anthracite fields conditions will never be better than now to stubbornly fight for them.

The miners' union today comprises upwards of 175,000 workers, or more than 90 per cent of the men employed in and about the hard coal mines. Heretofore the union has always been regarded by the operators as being in the minority, and there has been a strenuous objection to full and complete recognition of a minority force of employees. Conditions are different now and the miners are determined this year to fight for full and complete recognition of their organization.

The miners have already formulated demands which would change the present status of employees and employers. At the district convention these demands were formulated, and they have been approved by the national convention of mine workers in session at Indianapolis. The union leaders, according to their announced program, are going to demand an 8-hour work day, recognition of the union, 20 per cent. increase of wages, abolition of the conciliation board, weighing of the coal and several minor matters. The check-off does not form a part of their demands, but by recognition they mean the establishing of a system for collection of the union dues through the company offices then the miners are certain to be fought to the last ditch by the operators.

It is pretty safe to say that the operators will not accede to all of the demands of the miners. The most of the operators want that a fair increase in wages can not be denied the men. Some of them are not willing to grant to relate, forty one young people came forward to the altar surrendering themselves to God's will concerning them.

Chicago, Jan. 28. A news boy picked up the money. Three women were arrested with the men who were to be lined up before the park employees for identification. The raid was made on a tip from a woman. The money thrown from the window was in a box said to contain from $3,000 to $10,000. The police would not give a definite amount. The exact sum secured by the robbers in the bank robbery was given at $15,615, all of which was in currency.

ARGUMENT ENDS IN MURDER OF MADERA FARMER LAST NIGHT

Seventeen Year Old Boy Kills A. J. Bloom in Defense of His Father

Argument Started Over Trespassing of Stock and Participants Became Enraged and Started to Quarrel—Boy Gives Himself up.

As the result of an argument in regard to the trespassing of stock on each others' land, Andrew Jackson Bloom, aged 55 years of Madera, was killed by Andrew Kitko, a seventeen-year-old son of John Kitko also of Madera with whom Mr. Bloom was quarreling.

The trouble occurred about 6 o'clock last evening. Bloom and Kitko became enraged during their quarrel and according to the facts as ascertained, Bloom picked up an axe and endeavored to strike Kitko with it. The younger Kitko was a witness to the entire affair, and when he saw that his father was in danger of being hurt, he picked up a large piece of 2x4 and struck Bloom on the head. Bloom toppled over and when he was examined it was found that he was dead.

Immediately the authorities at Madera were notified of the deed, and Kitko walked into "Square Ruffins" office last night and gave himself up. The justice of the peace at once notified Corporal Pollum in DuBois. The coroner will go to Madera this afternoon and hold a post-mortem examination over the dead man.

EDUCATIONAL MOVIES AT Y. M. C. A. TO CONTINUE

"The Beloved Vagabond" Based on Novel by William J. Locke to be Presented

Because of the success of the educational motion pictures at the local association last Saturday evening, Secretary Lewis has decided to continue the project for a few weeks longer, and has secured for this week's program a new "Gold Booster" feature film beautifully colored. "A Romantic Drama," "The Beloved Vagabond" in six reels founded on the wonderful novel of William J. Locke. The project seemed likely to fail until last Saturday when over three hundred people turned out to see the remarkable feature shown last Saturday. As a result of this an entertainment will be given tomorrow evening and Mr. Lewis promises if the attendance warrants it, he will arrange for a series of five entertainments presenting a well balanced program each Saturday evening, with an accompanying reading course.

The story "The Beloved Vagabond" is one of Locke's best and gives a wonderful opportunity for clever interpretation for film production. From a photographic and artistic viewpoint, this feature is undoubtedly one of the best products of the 3-reel studios. It has just been released and Clearfield is very fortunate in having an opportunity of seeing this picture first.

Because of these facts the patronage of all people interested in a movement of this kind is earnestly solicited. Two shows first starting at 7 o'clock. Price of admission 5 and 10 cents.

QUICK-WITTED ITALIAN WOMAN SNATCHES PURSE

Young Lady's Plead Changes Real Rapidly—Arrest is Certain To Follow

A quick-witted Italian woman, who was followed by what proved to be good fortune to a local young lady in the rush at the five and ten cent store sale this morning. Mrs. Geo. T. Rauch, of 222 Fourth street, was one of the early shoppers. During her visit to the store she dropped a purse containing a fairly large sum of money, not noticing its loss until she left the store.

A girl stooped and picked the purse up from the floor, surprise at the find clearly expressed on her face. The Italian woman, standing near her, snatched the purse, exclaiming "It is mine!"

The young lady did not question her claim and would perhaps never have known that the purse was not in the hands of its rightful owner had not Mrs. Rauch returned to the store to cause a search to be made. A number of people declare that they can identify the woman who claimed the purse. The case is now in the hands of the police, and her arrest is expected at any time.

Fifty Dollars Cleared for Woman's Club—Over One Hundred Present

One of the most pleasant social events of the winter season was the Military Euchre held last evening in the ball room of the Dimeling hotel, at which over one hundred people attended. The euchre was given by the entertainment committee for the Woman's club, and the proceeds will be used for defraying the large expense of maintaining the club house on Market street and paying for some urgently needed improvements.

Seventeen tables were played, three couples at each table. The tables were named after the states of the union. The Pennsylvania table took the prize having more flags at the end of the evening than any other table. The following players were at the Pennsylvania table: Misses Julia Bell, Elizabeth Duffon and Helen Ferguson, Messrs. J. A. Kase, William Reading, Reiley Lytle. The winning bunch was designated by a beautiful bunch of roses.

The ball room was tastefully decorated in numerous United States flags and presented a most attractive appearance. The women cleared fifty dollars above expenses.

FUND FOR ROAD TO HOSPITAL GROWING $15 MORE PAID

Preliminary Estimates of Road And Driveway Indicate $100 is Needed

Work Was Begun Yesterday on Construction of Temporary Under Path From the Road to Hospital.

Another substantial addition to the Hospital Road fund has been received from an anonymous donor, and now the total of the fund is $45 with sufficient pledges for early contributions to bring to total up to $500 within the next ten days.

Preliminary estimates of the cost of the needed road and driveway indicate that upwards of $1000 will be required to put the frontage of the hospital in respectable condition. This will include the extension of the hospital pavement to a point beyond the hospital grounds, and the construction of a drive and footpath from the new road to the hospital steps, with suitable arrangements for automobiles.

Work was begun yesterday on the construction of a temporary under path from the road to the hospital, but this cannot possibly offer more than temporary relief on account of the marshy nature of the ground at the hospital entrance, and it will soon be destroyed by the rains.

Paving is essential, and must be done. The hospital itself is not financially able to meet the situation, as it is even now piling up a monthly obligation of something like $200 on account of maintenance, which must be provided for by the directors through monthly contributions from those interested in the hospital's welfare. Steps to overcome this monthly debt have been taken, and the director has then been told to be successful.

This, however, is aside from the paving plan, funds for which are almost as imperative as additions to the maintenance fund.

Any contribution, however small, is welcome in the Paving Fund, as do not hesitate to help the good work along just because you cannot make the large contributions. The Progress is a contribution, and will turn all funds received over to the board of directors of the hospital.

To date the fund is as follows:

FARM BUREAU TO START WORK ABOUT JULY FIRST

Clearfield County Put in Class of Eight Counties for Instructions

At a meeting of the board of the trustees of State College held in Harrisburg the first part of the week, Clearfield county was put in a class with seven other counties for the farm bureau work. About July 1 funds will be available for carrying on the work and headquarters will be established. Immediately after the establishment of headquarters, experts on farming sent out by State College will start work instructing the farmers in the modern methods of agriculture and giving expert advice to them.

The farm bureau has just been established during the past year but already 23 counties are receiving the free instructions from the experts sent out by the state and eight counties support their own bureau. These bureaus are productive of much good in increasing the farm crops and in encouraging scientific farming in a region.

WHERE DOLLARS COUNT

What do you suppose would be the ration of death in Clearfield if it were not for the Clearfield Hospital? We are not prepared to say, nor can any one estimate the figure with even reasonable accuracy. Whatever the percentage, it is just that much of human life saved—just that much of the community's assets conserved to the community. And the hospital always stands as a haven of refuge for the unfortunate sick, whether they be rich or poor. Its doors are open to those who suffer physical ills just as the church and its spiritual comforts offers itself to those whose souls seek peace.

So support the hospital. It needs your help now, and needs it sorely. It is running behind of its current maintenance expenses; it needs an extension of the road which passes its door; it needs other things which only money can buy. Your good will is an asset, but not the right kind of asset in an emergency which requires cash. Your sympathy is valued, but sympathy will not buy roads or those purely material things which must be bought if the charity work of the institution is to go forward without interruption.

The subscription list now open for contributions for road work is a worthy one. Aside from its other requirements, the hospital needs this road badly. It is necessary not only for the comfort and convenience of the hospital staff, but for the hundreds of people who daily visit the institution on business or to visit the sick.

Do not make a thin purse an excuse for not supporting this plan. A dime is as acceptable as a check for a hundreds dollars. The big idea is to contribute something, however little.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

"Cotton, the staple of premier war renown and of blockade notoriety, was the foundation and backbone of the prosperity that English administration has been able to bring to Egypt in recent years," begins a bulletin just prepared by the National Geographic Society. "In lower Egypt and in the Soudan, the English believe that they have discovered the most favorable cotton-growing country on earth; and enthusiastic planters of Egypt have proclaimed the cotton of the Nile delta as the finest in the world. At least, they have statistics on their side to prove that the per-acre production of the fertile delta fields can be made the greatest among all cotton-growing countries."

"Cotton and Cremer" made the regeneration of Egypt possible, is the way Englishmen emphasized the importance of Egyptian cotton, by linking it with the name of their foremost colonial statesman. This African crop is of still greater importance today to the people who have fostered its culture. In short, it is the prize that goes with Egypt's possession. Irrigation works developed by English engineers made large-scale cotton plantings possible; cotton crops set Egyptian labor free; put wages into the hands of the poverty-stricken peasants; and transformed small estates into large ones. It attracted attention and capital to the land of the Pharaohs and Mahdists, and encouraged a temper in the people willing for administrative reforms.

"Egypt is essentially an agricultural country, with its great river, the Nile, a magnificent, costless fertilization plant, and the clear, sun-drenched sky, a forcing-bell. Where water reaches Egypt's soil, crops smile forth in profusion, and cotton, neighboring the mills of Austria, Italy, Great Britain, France and Germany, took rank over all the other products of the fields."

"From 1804 to 1904, the cotton crop of Egypt doubled in quantity and value. The financial crisis of 1907 struck the country a still harder blow than it did the countries of Europe, and the cotton plantings suffered severely. From 1910, the export of cotton grew to a total value of about $125,000,000. This advance was made in spite of the cotton worm and the boll worm, which made considerable ravages, more successfully due to carelessness of the native planters."

"The best seeds have been distributed to the cotton planters in Egypt, including the celebrated Sea-Island variety native to this country. Egyptian cotton is said to be remarkable for the soft quality of its lint, which, compared with American upland cotton, makes the latter seem rough and harsh in quality. There is, however, a certain element of patriotism in the Egyptian's appreciation of his leading crop. Besides being more silky, and somewhat longer than American cotton—the best hitherto grown in the world—Egyptian cotton mercerizes easier; so that it finds a special market among manufacturers turning semi-silk and silk-gloss cotton goods. Cheaper neckties, glowing vests, hat linings, and lustrous waist materials were largely made before the war out of the Egyptian product."

"Gowns, whose unsubstantial fabric seems to dissolve in their diaphanous waves and folds, were largely of the fibre of the cotton grown on the Nile. The fibre of most of the cotton cultivated in Egypt, however, is not as long or as strong as American Sea-Island cotton, nor does it yield so large a crop as American upland cotton, where the latter is properly cultivated. American cotton is white, where Egyptians' are cream-colored brownish. This, in years when modes are favorable, brings a much higher price for the Egyptian cottons. The promise of the Nile country as a region for cotton-growing has hardly begun its course of realization. Irrigation may increase its production, already important in the world-market, many fold, while hundreds of thousands of acres in the Soudan may some not distant day be sown with this crop. The American and the Egyptian crops represent the two main types of cottons of world commerce."

AUTOBIOGRAPHIES IN CONGRESSIONAL RECORD MISSING

Congressmen Avoid Telling About Their Early Life in Congress Chambers

Men Who Formerly Gave History of Life Win Distinction by Going to The Opposite Extremes.

Washington, Jan. 27.—(By United Press.)—The gentle gibes of the heartless scribes in the house and senate press galleries, the scribes aver, are responsible for the almost total absence from this year's congressional directory of the once numerous annual crop of autobiographies of "self-made" solons. Mighty few of the extraordinary large number of new congressmen this year dwell upon the days in the log cabin and the hardships of early youth. Some men who formerly took space to tell about themselves now win distinction by going to the opposite extreme.

Minority Leader Mann made one mistake in his brief description of himself. He wrote: "James R. Mann, Republican, of Chicago, was born in 1856; elected to the Fifty-fifth and succeeding congresses. Member of the Banking and Currency Committee." This last statement got into the proof sheets of the directory, but the committee makers did not put Mr. Mann on the B. & C. committee. Here is a notable sample of brevity.

"Thaddeus H. Carraway, Democrat, New York." This is the only one of the 115 congressmen who have been elected this year who have not told by the members of their own life.

From the Fourth district of New York state says of himself:

"Otis Wingo, Democrat, of De Queen, member of Sixty-third congress, re-elected to Sixty-fourth congress."

There is another brief sketch in the directory which records modestly the story of the rise to political fame of a Western senator. The story was first told with more regard for detail. Then somebody gave him a "hunch" and he beat the jockeys to it by a neck and stopped the proofs and now three lines tell the story.

Colorado has a delegation in the house that reads like this: Representative Ben Clark Hillford "was born in a log cabin on a farm eight north of Colorado, Clarke County, Pa."

Representative Charles Bateman (Republican) "his boyhood was spent on a farm."

Representative Taylor: "Spent his early life on a farm and stock ranch." Probably the most interesting narrative of one's self in the directory is that of James Harvey Davis, of Texas, "Cyclone" Davis, as he is technically known in the nomenclature of political explosives. Mr. Davis takes up some space to tell about this matter as follows:

"In debating the money question with C. M. Van Hook in 1892 at the town of Dallas in Franklin, Ky., he was reported by the Cincinnati Enquirer and Chicago papers as 'Texas Cyclone,' under which title over half of his mail is now received."

The final triumph is recorded as follows:

"Was elected to the Sixty-fourth congress with the Hon. Jeff McLemore (chosen to fill a temporary vacancy) as colleague, receiving some 200 votes less than his colleague, an unusual penalty for not having always been a 'bachelor' Democrat, and heavily probed by rival units."

The "colleague" to whom Cyclone Davis refers adds a bit of spice to the Texas delegation chronicles. "Jeff McLemore," as he signs himself, pleads guilty to having been born "on a farm two miles west of Spring Hill, Maury County, Tennessee." He adds that the event occurred on "Friday, the 13th of March," and "who's afraid of a storm."

"He is a bachelor and a newspaper man," says he.

"Lied but little schooling," writes Jeff McLemore, "because of his aversion to teachers, and as a pupil never saw the inside of school room after he was 14 years old."

"LES MISERABLES"

Fashion Hints By Margaret Mason

(Written For The United Press.)

Sleeveless nighties, ankle short Are the new alluring sort; In them Sue's so sweet a sight, 'Tis a shame to douse the light.

New York, Jan. 28.—The newest nighties are bound to be a source of vexation to those unfortunates whose vaccinations are thus laid bare either by the lack of sleeves or the lack of length. But who can deny that they are adorable? It takes little material but lots of art to evolve them and a little nerve and lots of charm to wear 'em. About the only way you can tell a nightie from a chemise these days and nights is by inches. The chemise is cut just above the knee and the nightie just below it. It is true that most of the nighties actually blush for their own shortcomings and this beautiful blush pink dyes them whether they be of sheer batiste crepe de chine or the new wash satin. It takes lots of sibilants to describe them and but little else—sheer, short, sleeveless and simple will do the work and there you have it. Just to be consistently short in every respect the new nighties are also short waisted and the empire waist line is shown on all the smartest models. Narrow face edgings outlining the armholes and low neck line; briar stitching in pink or blue, touches of smocking or embroidery in pink or blue are all the ornamentations permissible on these chaste little sleeping garments of the moment. They must be highly hygienic, allowing as they do for so much fresh air, but one shudders to think how soon these quacks of nighties will become an extinct species along with the Doan's Backache Kidney Pills if they keep on drifting away to nothing in this mad race they have begun.

There is a new trend in the checked material looks of military fair, they are getting reckless too. Time was when a boudoir cap meant a coquettish little morsel of ribbons and lace and net, or at most, pastel tinted bits of cotton or crepe de chine. Nowdays one must be coiffed like a gypsy or one of the Russian ballet in vivid knud silks twisted in turban shapes or wierd and oriental head dresses. One cunning model that turns you into a snow maid or a fly white kitten is made of white wash satin gathered up into a rosette on top of the head with a fluffy ball of swansdown. Pluffs of swansdown alternating with a tiny French ribbon roses frame the face. These swansdown trimmed caps are also charming when combined with satin of delicate tints and are verily far more fascinating when up on my lady's head than down on the swan's.

TREMENDOUS WAR BOOM IS ENJOYED BY SCANDINAVIA

Norway Receives Lion's Share of War Business—Norway's Wealth Greatly Increased

War Has Meant Boom Such as the Old World Has Not Enjoyed Hitherto in Historic Times.

BY CHAS. P. STEWART (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Copenhagen, Jan. 5.—(By Mail.)—Scandinavia is enjoying a tremendous war boom. It is more or less common to Sweden, Denmark and Norway, but so far as appearances go, it is most pronounced in Norway.

Sweden has sold to the belligerents, especially to Germany, immense amounts of raw and finished products, including war munitions, though these latter sales were not countenanced by the Swedish government. Denmark, being separated from Germany only by an imaginary line instead of a stretch of mined and dangerous water, has done still better. The lion's share of the war business, however, has gone to Norway.

The Norwegians have profited, to some extent, like Sweden and Denmark, by sales of their own goods to the belligerent nations, especially to Germany, but it has been as middlemen that the bulk of their business has been done. Norway was the world's third maritime nation when the war broke out. England ranked first, Germany second. England still ranks first but even the British merchant's first line has suffered heavily from the destruction incidental to war. Germany's merchant shipping has been out of commission altogether since the early days of hostilities. This was Norway's chance.

Compared with Norway, America's war boom has been a small affair. This is speaking relatively, of course. In actual dollars and cents the European struggle unquestionably has brought more money to the United States than to any other country. Comparatively Norway has been the big winner. That is, the Norwegians are richer by the struggle to the extent of about $200,000,000 in actual cash thus far. To proportion they already owed there has been added a value of approximately as much more. This is on a basis of a population of 2,500,000.

An addition of $80 per capita to Norway's wealth in a year and a half has been felt emphatically. It has meant a boom such as the old world has not seen hitherto in historic times. Millionaires have been created wholesale. Many of them are millionaires only in kroner—a krona being in the neighborhood of 27 cents—but a jump from nothing, in 18 months, to a fortune of $250,000 to $270,000, which has happened in hundreds of cases, is not so bad. The big old shipping firms have profited in actual millions of dollars. The newly made millionaires in Norwegian money are mainly mere clerks in shipping houses, or working officers of ocean going craft who were able to command a little credit and branched out in business for themselves.

Numbers of the newly-made magnates have never a ship. They have bought vessels in course of construction or invested merely in charters and have been able to transfer either these unfinished craft or their charters, so rapid was the increase in the demand for bottoms at huge advances, sometimes in the course of no more than a few days. War taxes have been high, but profits have been so much higher that the taxes have hardly been felt. The Norwegians count on being the world's second maritime power when the war ends. Only England, they believe, will lead them. Neither do they believe their boom will burst with the struggle's end.

Shipbuilding, with the exception of warships, has been practically at a standstill since fighting began, they point out. This means, they say, that the supply of vessels has not been kept up in proportion to the world's increasing demand. More than this, emphasis is laid on the fact that there has been, first and last, a heavy destruction of ocean-going craft by mines and submarines, adding greatly to the shortage the world already feels and will feel still more keenly with the Post-bellum revival of international trade.

Finally, it is argued that the ships which have simply been laid up in port because they dared not sail the seas, are slowly deteriorating from disuse and will be more and more nearly worthless the longer the war lasts. It will take years, the Norwegians maintain, to restore an equality between the supply and demand for ships for purely commercial purposes.

During all these years Norway expects to continue gathering in huge profits, dwindling, perhaps, as time progresses, but gradually reaching a satisfactory normal, without any violent shock and with the Norwegians finally the world's second nation as traders on the seas. The recent influx of cash money has had its effect in all lines. The shipping trade has felt it most but mining, manufacturing and even the line of industries have been enormously stimulated. The average of the big new company profits is about 100 per cent. Including the profits of the countries have been enormous. The inadequate fuel supply, for example, of the Spitzbergen coal mines has been begun with the new coal furnished by the belligerents, on a large scale.

Spitzbergen, which seems in the United States like almost the last place on earth, is mentioned in Christianity as if it were no more remote than Alaska seems to Seattle. The coal mined there is declared to be the best quality bituminous and with it the Norwegians speak of making their country, in the near future, one of the biggest manufacturing nations of the world.

Has the Norwegian workingman received a fair share of the war profits? No, Norwegians generally declare that the belligerents' money has gone into few hands. Still, they say their country's workers are better paid than those of any other country in Europe. They are hopeful that a better adjustment between the classes is not far distant. A concrete reason why Sweden and Denmark have not gained as much from the war as has Norway unquestionably lies in the fact that Norway possesses the one thing needed to take advantage of the situation, ships, and that Sweden and Denmark did not.

Aside from this the Norwegians appear to have been better business men than either Swedes or Danes. They saw their chance and grabbed it, grabbed it out of the other Scandinavian countries' hands.

FIRST DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, OR GAS ON STOMACH

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking Tonicine Tablets.

People with weak stomachs should take Tonicine Tablets occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, acid risings, gas on stomach or belching of undigested food, headaches, dizziness or a sick stomach, and besides what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved few minutes after taking Tonicine Tablets.

Go to your druggist and get a box of Tonicine Tablets, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are no germs in your any more bad nights and uncomfortable days for you. Tonicine is the food you need to make you feel like the best worth living.

PRACTICAL TALK ON BUSINESS BY E. ST. ELMO LEWIS

National Authority on Business
Gives Excellent Advice to
Erie Board of Commerce

Secretary Bodine of Chamber of Commerce Receives Extracts From Address Which May Be of Value to Clearfield Business Men.

The following is an extract of an address delivered by E. St. Elmo Lewis before the Erie Board of Commerce and which was sent to Mr. Bodine, Secretary of the Clearfield Chamber of Commerce by Mr. Lewis. Mr. Lewis is a national authority on advertising, salesmanship, and credits and a much quoted author on business subjects. In this address he presented many practical pointers which may be of some special benefit to the business men of Clearfield as ideas containing much good common sense.

"I hear among you gentlemen once in a while, the suggestion that we ought to buy all our goods in Erie. That is a good idea. I thoroughly approve of it, but I approve of it only on the condition that it is a business proposition, and that it is the result of the city.

"First—Have advertised in such an attractive and human way that everybody in the city knows what goods they have for sale.

Get Ready for Trade
"Second—That they have dressed their windows so attractively, kept them so clean, and had such suggestive arrangement that everybody who saw them, noticed them and wanted to go inside to see the goods.

"Third—That they have such well-lighted stores and goods so well displayed that it was interesting to go inside the stores and look at the goods there.

"Fourth—That they have such well-trained, courteous and attentive clerks behind the counters, that the man or woman entering the store was given such attentive and kindly treatment that it was a pleasure to do business in that store.

Proper Buying
"Fifth—That the proprietor of the store went so often to the main markets, and so carefully selected the goods and priced them, that when he came back here everybody who saw them admitted that they were the best goods for the money that they could get anywhere.

"Sixth—That the proprietor himself had such a command of all the details of his business, that he got his bills out when they should be sent, that they were accurate, and that he had plain, straight-forward dealings with his customers, so that they knew exactly what they were expecting to get and got what they expected.

"I tell you, gentlemen, when you have a retail community dominated with such principles, you don't have any trouble about keeping the people at home. It is only when you have a community that doesn't know what you have for sale, that enters the store and receives discourteous, inattentive treatment, that sees seconds and thirds displayed on the counter, that has to take a piece of goods to the front door to get enough light to find out what it is like, that has to look through dirty and grimy windows at the goods—then you have no business to go to more attractive centers to a business."

STATION AGENTS OF B. & P. RAILWAY HOLD MEETING

Matters Pertaining to Claims, Expenses and Agent's Work Discussed

The station agents of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh railway held their regular bi-monthly meeting at East Salamanca, N. Y., on January 26th, where matters pertaining to claims, handling of explosives, and agent's work in general were taken up.

These meetings were held at different points on the line and are in accordance with the policy of the company in familiarizing agents with conditions at other stations; and also to give them an insight into the way other agents conduct their work. At each meeting certain agents deliver papers on subjects of which have previously been assigned, relative to different phases of the station agent's work. At the completion of the reading of the papers, the subject is open to discussion of all present.

Similar meetings are held in the engineering, stores and mechanical departments and are conducted in much the same manner. These meetings were started nearly two years ago and it is believed that they are productive of much good.

ALBANIA WITH EXCEPTION OF PORT EVACUATED BY ALLIES

Valona Battle Expected to be The Most Important of War

BY HENRY WOOD
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rome, Jan. 28.—Albania with the exception of the port of Valona and the immediate hinterland is being evacuated by the Allies. Italian forces hold strongly fortified positions at Valona. Heavy Austrian and Bulgarian detachments are closing in upon the seaport from the north and east. They are meeting with little resistance.

Official dispatches received here today indicated that the attack on Valona and one of the most important battles of the Balkan struggle, may begin within a fortnight. The Austrian fleet in all probability will attempt to participate in the engagement by shelling Valona from the Adriatic. In this event an encounter with the allies' squadron is certain to bring perhaps the greatest naval fight of the war. Conquest of Montenegro and the capture of the Albanian town of Scutari and San Giovanni Di Medua by the Austrians made further resistance by scattered Serbian forces in northern Albania useless.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ATTEND REVIVAL LAST EVENING

Rev. O. B. Poulson Preaches a Fine Sermon to the Epworth League

A large number of young people of the Epworth League and their friends gathered last night at the Trinity Methodist church to hear Rev. O. B. Poulson speak at the evangelistic meetings he is holding.

The League entered the auditorium singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." Mr. Knight conducted a spirited song service and E. V. Brown, president of the League led in prayer. The young people's choir then sang two beautiful selections, "The Touch of His Hand on Mine," and "Crown Him." Mr. Poulson said himself in the presentation of his theme. His text was taken from John 17:19. "For their sakes, I sanctify myself." His story abounds with examples to illustrate this theme. In July 1914, little Belgium set herself to the task of keeping war-like Germany from sweeping down upon France and taking by recognition they mean the establishing of a system for collection of the union dues through the company offices then the miners are certain to be fought to the last ditch by the operators.

It is pretty safe to say that the operators will not accede to all of the demands of the miners. The most of the operators want that a fair increase in wages can be negotiated. Some of them are not bitterly opposed to an eight-hour day. Modified recognition of the union is opposed, such as recognizing the union by entering into a working contract with the organization and its officials. But full and complete recognition as represented by the check-off will not come without a fight.

With the men organized as they have never been, their treasuries filled and the rank and file determined, the United Mine Workers of America is at the point where it can now wage its best fight. The operators likewise are believed to be well prepared for a struggle to a finish if the men persist in their demands. Within the past few months thousands of tons of anthracite coal have been stored and many thousands of tons more will be added to the supply on hand before the agreement between operators and mine workers expires at the end of March. The coal in storage is far in excess of what it was four years ago, when the miners and operators renewed their working agreement.

SWITZERLAND APOLOGIZES FOR ACTIONS OF STUDENTS

Chief of Swiss Political Party Will Offer Apology to German Ambassador

Berlin, Jan. 28. (By United Press.)—The Swiss government today formally apologized to Germany for the action of Swiss students and other persons in tearing down the German flag from the consulate at Lausanne. The German foreign office has demanded a further investigation of the act and has demanded that the flag be hoisted again and protected by the Swiss authorities. The rioting students also damaged the German shield at the consulate it was stated. As a further expression of regret the Swiss federal council has decided to send the chief of its political department to the German ambassador at Bern to offer an apology.

ANTHRACITE WAGES TO BE SETTLED BY JOINT COMMITTEE

Mine Workers Will Make Hard Fight For Concessions From The Operators

Miner-Union Today Numerically and Financially Stronger Than Ever—Miners Have Already Formulated Demands.

New York, Jan. 28.—Two weeks from today the anthracite operators and miners will begin a joint conference in this city in an endeavor to agree upon a new scale of wages and working conditions to come into effect on April 1, when the present agreement will expire. With the approach of the date for the conference, considerable curiosity is evinced, especially in the mining region itself, as to what steps the two contending parties will take. The relations between employers and employees have been governed for nearly fourteen years by the award of the commission which the President of the United States appointed to settle the strike of 1902. The award was for a term of three years only, but it was renewed in 1906, (after a six weeks' suspension) and again in 1909 and 1912.

The probabilities are that the United Mine Workers of America will make the fight of its life for concessions that have been denied in the last 15 years. The miners' union is today numerically and financially stronger than it has ever been in its history, and mine workers and their leaders feel that if the dreams of unionism are to be realized in the anthracite fields conditions will never be better than now to stubbornly fight for them.

The miners' union today comprises upwards of 175,000 workers, or more than 90 per cent of the men employed in and about the hard coal mines. Heretofore the union has always been regarded by the operators as being in the minority, and there has been a strenuous objection to full and complete recognition of a minority force of employees. Conditions are different now and the miners are determined this year to fight for full and complete recognition of their organization.

The miners have already formulated demands which would change the present status of employees and employers. At the district conventions these demands were formulated, and they have been approved by the national convention of mine workers in session at Indianapolis. The union leaders, according to their announced program, are going to demand an 8-hour work day, recognition of the union, 20 per cent increase of wages, abolition of the conciliation board, weighing of the coal and several minor matters. The check-off does not form a part of their demands, but by recognition they mean the establishing of a system for collection of the union dues through the company offices then the miners are certain to be fought to the last ditch by the operators.

It is pretty safe to say that the operators will not accede to all of the demands of the miners. The most of the operators want that a fair increase in wages can be negotiated. Some of them are not bitterly opposed to an eight-hour day. Modified recognition of the union is opposed, such as recognizing the union by entering into a working contract with the organization and its officials. But full and complete recognition as represented by the check-off will not come without a fight.

With the men organized as they have never been, their treasuries filled and the rank and file determined, the United Mine Workers of America is at the point where it can now wage its best fight. The operators likewise are believed to be well prepared for a struggle to a finish if the men persist in their demands. Within the past few months thousands of tons of anthracite coal have been stored and many thousands of tons more will be added to the supply on hand before the agreement between operators and mine workers expires at the end of March. The coal in storage is far in excess of what it was four years ago, when the miners and operators renewed their working agreement.

This active movement at storage indicates that the hard coal operators are preparing for any emergency, and leads to the belief in some sections that coal interests are actually preparing for a strike. With the mine workers in a mood to fight to a finish to secure a permanent certificate of existence to their organization the probabilities are that a real crisis is almost at hand in the anthracite fields. At the same time the leaders on both sides profess a desire for peace and express the hope that the coming joint conference in this city will result in an amicable agreement.

ARGUMENT ENDS IN MURDER OF MADERA FARMER LAST NIGHT

Seventeen Year Old Boy Kills A. J. Bloom in Defense of His Father

Argument Started Over Trespassing of Stock and Participants Became Enraged and Started to Quarrel—Boy Gives Himself up.

As the result of an argument in regard to the trespassing of stock on each others' land, Andrew Jackson Bloom, aged 55 years of Madera, was killed by Andrew Kitko, a seventeen-year-old son of John Kitko also of Madera with whom Mr. Bloom was quarreling.

The trouble occurred about 6 o'clock last evening. Bloom and Kitko became enraged during their quarrel and according to the facts as ascertained, Bloom picked up an axe and endeavored to strike Kitko with it. The younger Kitko was a witness to the entire affair, and when he saw that his father was in danger of being hurt, he picked up a large piece of 2x4 and struck Bloom on the head. Bloom toppled over and when he was examined it was found that he was dead.

Immediately the authorities at Madera were notified of the deed, and Kitko walked into "Square Ruffins" office last night and gave himself up. The justice of the peace at once notified Corporal Pollum in DuBois. The coroner will go to Madera this afternoon and hold a post-mortem examination over the dead man.

The man will come up for trial at the next term of criminal court.

EDUCATIONAL MOVIES AT Y. M. C. A. TO CONTINUE

"The Beloved Vagabond" Based on Novel by William J. Locke to be Presented

Because of the success of the educational motion pictures at the local association last Saturday evening, Secretary Lewis has decided to continue the project for a few weeks longer, and has secured for this week's program a new "Gold Booster" feature film beautifully colored. "A Romantic Drama," "The Beloved Vagabond" in six reels founded on the wonderful novel of William J. Locke. The project seemed likely to fail until last Saturday when over three hundred people turned out to see the remarkable feature shown last Saturday. As a result of this an entertainment will be given tomorrow evening and Mr. Lewis promises if the attendance warrants it, he will arrange for a series of five entertainments presenting a well balanced program each Saturday evening, with an accompanying reading course.

The story "The Beloved Vagabond" is one of Locke's best and gives a wonderful opportunity for clever interpretation for film production. From a photographic and artistic viewpoint, this feature is undoubtedly one of the best products of the 3-reel studios. It has just been released and Clearfield is very fortunate in having an opportunity of seeing this picture first.

Because of these facts the patronage of all people interested in a movement of this kind is earnestly solicited. Two shows first starting at 7 o'clock. Price of admission 5 and 10 cents.

SUSPECTS IN ROBBERY CAPTURED BY POLICE

News Boy Picks Up Money Which Men Throw Out of Windows Before Raid

Chicago, Jan. 28. (By United Press.)—Five men suspects in yesterday's daring robbery of Jake Stahl's Washington Park National bank threw thousands of dollars in currency and coin from a window into the street when their rooming house was raided by the police today. A news boy picked up the money. Three women were arrested with the men who were to be lined up before the park employees for identification. The raid was made on a tip from a woman. The money thrown from the window was in a box said to contain from $3,000 to $10,000. The police would not give a definite amount. The exact sum secured by the robbers in the bank robbery was given at $15,615, all of which was in currency.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY.

Hastings, Minn., Jan. 28.—Club women of this little city, proud of being located on the "Father of Waters," tired of eating the stream and organized a pure ice plant, after some one wrote a popular ballad, "Frozen Mice For Lemonade." At the end of the first year the women rebated $169.29 to their customers.

QUICK-WITTED ITALIAN WOMAN SNATCHES PURSE

Young Lady's Plead Changes Real Rapidly—Arrest is Certain To Follow

A quick-witted Italian woman, who was followed by what proved to be good fortune to a local young lady in the rush at the five and ten cent store sale this morning, Mrs. Geo. T. Rauch, of 222 Fourth street, was one of the early shoppers. During her visit to the store she dropped a purse containing a fairly large sum of money, not noticing its loss until she left the store.

A girl stooped and picked the purse up from the floor, surprise at the find clearly expressed on her face. The Italian woman, standing near her, snatched the purse, exclaiming "It is mine!"

The young lady did not question her claim, and would perhaps never have known that the purse was not in the hands of its rightful owner had not Mrs. Rauch returned to the store to cause a search to be made.

A number of people declare that they can identify the woman who claimed the purse. The case is now in the hands of the police, and her arrest is expected at any time.

MILITARY EUCHE IN THE DINING GREAT SUCCESS

Fifty Dollars Cleared for Woman's Club—Over One Hundred Present

One of the most pleasant social events of the winter season was the Military Euchre held last evening in the ball room of the Dimeling hotel, at which over one hundred people attended. The euchre was given by the entertainment committee for the Woman's club, and the proceeds will be used for defraying the large expense of maintaining the club house on Market street and paying for some urgently needed improvements.

Seventeen tables were played, three couples at each table. The tables were named after the states of the union. The Pennsylvania table took the prize having more flags at the end of the evening than any other table. The following players were at the Pennsylvania table: Misses Julia Bell, Elizabeth Duffon and Helen Ferguson, Messrs. J. A. Kase, William Reading, Reiley Lytle. The winning bunch was designated by a beautiful bunch of roses.

The ball room was tastefully decorated in numerous United States flags and presented a most attractive appearance. The women cleared fifty dollars above expenses.

FRED FULTON AND PORKY FLYNN IN 20 ROUND BOUT

New Orleans, Jan. 28.—(By United Press.)—Barrage accidents, peevish promoters and other justly famous slips 'twixt cups and lips, Fred Fulton, Minnesota Giant, will mix here tonight with Porky Flynn over the twenty round route. It is Fulton's first genuine opportunity to show what he's got. If he can scramble Porky into defeat, he'll probably get that long-deferred chance to commit assault and battery on Jess Willard, the Kansan who holds tight to the heavy title.

HEARING ON NATIONAL FOR- EST BILL

Washington, Jan. 28.—The House Committee on Agriculture today conducted a public hearing on the Weeks bill, which proposes to appropriate $50,000,000 to continue the purchase of timber lands for the establishment of national forests in New England and the Southern Appalachian regions. FUND FOR ROAD TO HOSPITAL GROWING $15 MORE PAID

Preliminary Estimates of Road And Driveway Indicate $100 is Needed

Work Was Begun Yesterday on Construction of Temporary Under Path From the Road to Hospital.

Another substantial addition to the Hospital Road fund has been received from an anonymous donor, and now the total of the fund is $45 with sufficient pledges for early contributions to bring to total up to $500 within the next ten days.

Preliminary estimates of the cost of the needed road and driveway indicate that upwards of $1000 will be required to put the frontage of the hospital in respectable condition. This will include the extension of the hospital pavement to a point beyond the hospital grounds, and the construction of a drive and footpath from the new road to the hospital steps, with suitable arrangements for automobiles.

Work was begun yesterday on the construction of a temporary under path from the road to the hospital, but this cannot possibly offer more than temporary relief on account of the marshy nature of the ground at the hospital entrance, and it will soon be destroyed by the rains.

Paving is essential, and must be done. The hospital itself is not financially able to meet the situation, as it is even now piling up a monthly obligation of something like $200 on account of maintenance, which must be provided for by the directors through monthly contributions from those interested in the hospital's welfare. Steps to overcome this monthly deficit have been taken, and the director has then been told to be successful.

This, however, is aside from the paving plan, funds for which are almost as imperative as additions to the maintenance fund.

Any contribution, however small, is welcome in the Paving Fund, as do not hesitate to help the good work along just because you cannot make the large contributions. The Progress will acknowledge the receipt of every contribution, and will turn all funds received over to the board of directors of the hospital.

To date the fund is as follows:

FARM BUREAU TO START WORK ABOUT JULY FIRST

Clearfield County Put in Class of Eight Counties for Instructions

At a meeting of the board of the trustees of State College held in Harrisburg the first part of the week, Clearfield county was put in a class with seven other counties for the farm bureau work. About July 1 funds will be available for carrying on the work and headquarters will be established. Immediately after the establishment of headquarters, experts on farming sent out by State College will start work instructing the farmers in the modern methods of agriculture and giving expert advice to them.

The farm bureau has just been established during the past year but already 23 counties are receiving the free instructions from the experts sent out by the state and eight counties support their own bureau. These bureaus are productive of much good in increasing the farm crops and in encouraging scientific farming in a region.

WHERE DOLLARS COUNT

What do you suppose would be the ration of death in Clearfield if it were not for the Clearfield Hospital? We are not prepared to say, nor can any one estimate the figure with even reasonable accuracy. Whatever the percentage, it is just that much of human life saved—just that much of the community's assets conserved to the community. And the hospital always stands as a haven of refuge for the unfortunate sick, whether they be rich or poor. Its doors are open to those who suffer physical ills just as the church and its spiritual comforts offers itself to those whose souls seek peace.

So support the hospital. It needs your help now, and needs it sorely. It is running behind of its current maintenance expenses; it needs an extension of the road which passes its door; it needs other things which only money can buy. Your good will is an asset, but not the right kind of asset in an emergency which requires cash. Your sympathy is valued, but sympathy will not buy roads or those purely material things which must be bought if the charity work of the institution is to go forward without interruption.

The subscription list now open for contributions for road work is a worthy one. Aside from its other requirements, the hospital needs this road badly. It is necessary not only for the comfort and convenience of the hospital staff, but for the hundreds of people who daily visit the institution on business or to visit the sick.

Do not make a thin purse an excuse for not supporting this plan. A dime is as acceptable as a check for a hundreds dollars. The big idea is to contribute something, however little.

Today's Geographic Study of The Great European War Zone

"Cotton, the staple of premier war renown and of blockade notoriety, was the foundation and backbone of the prosperity that English administration has been able to bring to Egypt in recent years," begins a bulletin just prepared by the National Geographic Society. "In lower Egypt and in the Soudan, the English believe that they have discovered the most favorable cotton-growing country on earth; and enthusiastic planters of Egypt have proclaimed the cotton of the Nile delta as the finest in the world. At least, they have statistics on their side to prove that the per-acre production of the fertile delta fields can be made the greatest among all cotton-growing countries."

"Cotton and Cremer" made the regeneration of Egypt possible, is the way Englishmen emphasized the importance of Egyptian cotton, by linking it with the name of their foremost colonial statesman. This African crop is of still greater importance today to the people who have fostered its culture. In short, it is the prize that goes with Egypt's possession. Irrigation works developed by English engineers made large-scale cotton plantings possible; cotton crops set Egyptian labor free; put wages into the hands of the poverty-stricken peasants; and transformed semi-ferocious nomads into small proprietors. It attracted attention and capital to the land of the Pharaohs and Mahdists, and encouraged a temper in the people willing for administrative reforms.

"Egypt is essentially an agricultural country, with its great river, the Nile, a magnificent, costless fertilization plant, and the clear, sun-drenched sky, a forcing-bell. Where water reaches Egypt's soil, crops smile forth in profusion, and cotton, neighboring the mills of Austria, Italy, Great Britain, France and Germany, took rank over all the other products of the fields."

"From 1804 to 1904, the cotton crop of Egypt doubled in quantity and value. The financial crisis of 1907 struck the country a still harder blow than it did the countries of Europe, and the cotton plantings suffered severely. From 1910, the export of cotton grew to a total value of about $125,000,000. This advance was made in spite of the cotton worm and the boll worm, which made considerable ravages, more successfully due to carelessness of the native planters."

"The best seeds have been distributed to the cotton planters in Egypt, including the celebrated Sea-Island variety native to this country. Egyptian cotton is said to be remarkable for the soft quality of its lint, which, compared with American upland cotton, makes the latter seem rough and harsh in quality. There is, however, a certain element of patriotism in the Egyptian's appreciation of his leading crop. Besides being more silky, and somewhat longer than American cotton—the best hitherto grown in the world—Egyptian cotton mercerizes easier; so that it finds a special market among manufacturers turning semi-silk and silk-gloss cotton goods. Cheaper neckties, glowing vests, hat linings, and lustrous waist materials were largely made before the war out of the Egyptian product."

"Gowns, whose unsubstantial fabric seems to dissolve in their diaphanous waves and folds, were largely of the fibre of the cotton grown on the Nile. The fibre of most of the cotton cultivated in Egypt, however, is not as long or as strong as American Sea-Island cotton, nor does it yield so large a crop as American upland cotton, where the latter is properly cultivated. American cotton is white, where Egyptians' are cream-colored brownish. This, in years when modes are favorable, brings a much higher price for the Egyptian cottons. The promise of the Nile country as a region for cotton-growing has hardly begun its course of realization. Irrigation may increase its production, already important in the world-market, many fold, while hundreds of thousands of acres in the Soudan may some not distant day be sown with this crop. The American and the Egyptian crops represent the two main types of cottons of world commerce."

AUTOBIOGRAPHIES IN CONGRESSIONAL RECORD MISSING

Congressmen Avoid Telling About Their Early Life in Congress Chambers

Men Who Formerly Gave History of Life Win Distinction by Going to The Opposite Extremes.

Washington, Jan. 27.—(By United Press.)—The gentle gibes of the heartless scribes in the house and senate press galleries, the scribes over, are responsible for the almost total absence from this year's congressional directory of the once numerous annual crop of autobiographies of "self-made" solons. Mighty few of the extraordinary large number of new congressmen this year dwell upon the days in the log cabin and the hardships of early youth. Some men who formerly took space to tell about themselves now win distinction by going to the opposite extreme.

Minority Leader Mann made one mistake in his brief description of himself. He wrote: "James R. Mann, Republican, of Chicago, was born in 1856; elected to the Fifty-fifth and succeeding congresses. Member of the Banking and Currency Committee." This last statement got into the proof sheets of the directory, but the committee makers did not put Mr. Mann on the B. & C. committee. Here is a notable sample of brevity.

"Thaddeus H. Carraway, Democrat, New York." This is the only one of the 115 congressmen who have been elected this year who are said by the members to be a native of New York.

From the Fourth district of New York state says of himself:

"Otis Wingo, Democrat, of De Queen, member of Sixty-third congress, re-elected to Sixty-fourth congress."

There is another brief sketch in the directory which records modestly the story of the rise to political fame of a Western senator. The story was first told with more regard for detail. Then somebody gave him a "hunch" and he beat the jockeys to it by a neck and stopped the proofs and now three lines tell the story.

Colorado has a delegation in the house that reads like this: Representative Ben Clark Hillford "was born in a log cabin on a farm eight north of Colorado, Clarke County, Pa."

Representative Charles Bateman (Republican) "his boyhood was spent on a farm."

Representative Taylor: "Spent his early life on a farm and stock ranch." Probably the most interesting narrative of one's self in the directory is that of James Harvey Davis, of Texas, "Cyclone" Davis, as he is technically known in the nomenclature of political explosives. Mr. Davis takes up some space to tell about this matter as follows:

"In debating the money question in the U. S. House in 1892 at the time of the panic in Frankfurt, Ky., he was reported by the Cincinnati Enquirer and Chicago papers as 'Texas Cyclone,' under which title over half of his mail is now received."

The final triumph is recorded as follows:

"Was elected to the Sixty-fourth congress with the Hon. Jeff McLemore (chosen to fill a temporary vacancy) as colleague, receiving some 200 votes less than his colleague, an unusual penalty for not having always been a leader? Democrat, and heavily defeated by rival anti's."

The "colleague" to whom Cyclone Davis refers adds a bit of spice to the Texas delegation chronicles. "Jeff McLemore," as he signs himself, pleads guilty to having been born "on a farm two miles west of Spring Hill, Maury County, Tennessee." He adds that the event occurred on "Friday, the 13th of March," and "who's afraid in a storm."

"He is a bachelor and a newspaper man," says he.

"Had but little schooling," writes Jeff McLemore, "because of his aversion to teachers, and as a pupil never saw the inside of school room after he was 14 years old."

"LES MISERABLES"

Fashion Hints By Margaret Mason

(Written For The United Press.)

Sleeveless nighties, ankle short Are the new alluring sort; In them Sue's so sweet a sight, 'Tis a shame to douse the light.

New York, Jan. 28.—The newest nighties are bound to be a source of vexation to those unfortunates whose vaccinations are thus laid bare either by the lack of sleeves or the lack of length. But who can deny that they are adorable? It takes little material but lots of art to evolve them and a little nerve and lots of charm to wear 'em. About the only way you can tell a nightie from a chemise these days and nights is by inches. The chemise is cut just above the knee and the nightie just below it. It is true that most of the nighties actually blush for their own shortcomings and this beautiful blush pink dyes them whether they be of sheer batiste crepe de chine or the new wash satin. It takes lots of sibilants to describe them and but little else—sheer, short, sleeveless and simple will do the work and there you have it. Just to be consistently short in every respect the new nighties are also short waisted and the empire waist line is shown on all the smartest models. Narrow face edgings outlining the armholes and low neck line; briar stitching in pink or blue, pink or blue are all the ornamentations permissible on these chaste little sleeping garments of the moment. They must be highly hygienic, allowing as they do for so much fresh air, but one shudders to think how soon these quacks of nighties will become an extinct species along with the Doan's Backache Kidney Pills if they keep on drifting away to nothing in this mad race they have begun.

There is no more to be said of the new nighties. They are the chicest of matronly looks of midlife fair, they are getting reckless too. Time was when a boudoir cap meant a coquetish little model of ribbons and lace and net, or at most, pastel tinted bits of cotton or crepe de chine. Nowdays one must be coiffed like a gypsy or one of the Russian ballet in vivid knotted silks twisted in turban shapes or wierd and oriental head dresses. One cunning model that turns you into a snow maid or a fly white kitten is made of white wash satin gathered up into a rosette on top of the head with a fluffy ball of swansdown. Pluffs of swansdown alternating with a tiny French ribbon roses frame the face. These swansdown trimmed caps are also charming when combined with satin of delicate tints and are verily far more fascinating when up on my lady's head than down on the swan's.

TREMENDOUS WAR BOOM IS ENJOYED BY SCANDINAVIA

Norway Receives Lion's Share of War Business—Norway's Wealth Greatly Increased

War Has Meant Boom Such as the Old World Has Not Enjoyed Hitherto in Historic Times.

BY CHAS. P. STEWART (United Press Staff Correspondent)

Copenhagen, Jan. 5.—(By Mail.)—Scandinavia is enjoying a tremendous war boom. It is more or less common to Sweden, Denmark and Norway, but so far as appearances go, it is most pronounced in Norway. Sweden has sold to the belligerents, especially to Germany, immense amounts of raw and finished products, including war munitions, though these latter sales were not countenanced by the Swedish government. Denmark, being separated from Germany only by an imaginary line instead of a stretch of mined and dangerous water, has done still better. The lion's share of the war business, however, has gone to Norway.

The Norwegians have profited, to some extent, like Sweden and Denmark, by sales of their own goods to the belligerent nations, especially to Germany, but it has been as middlemen that the bulk of their business has been done. Norway was the world's third maritime nation when the war broke out. England ranked first, Germany second. England still ranks first but even the British merchant's marine has suffered heavily from the destruction incidental to war. Germany's merchant shipping has been out of commission altogether since the early days of hostilities. This was Norway's chance.

Compared with Norway, America's war boom has been a small affair. This is speaking relatively, of course. In actual dollars and cents the European struggle unquestionably has brought more money to the United States than to any other country. Comparatively Norway has been the big winner. That is, the Norwegians are richer by the struggle to the extent of about $200,000,000 in actual cash thus far. To proportion they already owed there has been added a value of approximately as much more. This is on a basis of a population of 2,500,000.

An addition of $80 per capita to Norway's wealth in a year and a half has been felt emphatically. It has meant a boom such as the old world has not seen hitherto in historic times. Millionaires have been created wholesale. Many of them are millionaires only in kroner—a krona being in the neighborhood of 27 cents—but a jump from nothing, in 18 months, to a fortune of $250,000 to $270,000, which has happened in hundreds of cases, is not so bad. The big old shipping firms have profited in actual millions of dollars. The newly made millionaires in Norwegian money are mainly mere clerks in shipping houses, or working officers of ocean going craft who were able to command a little credit and branched out in business for themselves.

Numbers of the newly-made magnates have never a ship. They have bought vessels in course of construction or invested merely in charters and have been able to transfer either these unfinished craft or their charters, so rapid was the increase in the demand for bottoms at huge advances, sometimes in the course of no more than a few days. War taxes have been high, but profits have been so much higher that the taxes have hardly been felt. The Norwegians count on being the world's second maritime power when the war ends. Only England, they believe, will lead them. Neither do they believe their boom will burst with the struggle's end.

Shipbuilding, with the exception of warships, has been practically at a standstill since fighting began, they point out. This means, they say, that the supply of vessels has not been kept up in proportion to the world's increasing demand. More than this, emphasis is laid on the fact that there has been, first and last, a heavy destruction of ocean-going craft by mines and submarines, adding greatly to the shortage the world already feels and will feel still more keenly with the Post-bellum revival of international trade.

Finally, it is argued that the ships which have simply been laid up in port because they dared not sail the seas, are slowly deteriorating from disuse and will be more and more nearly worthless the longer the war lasts. It will take years, the Norwegians maintain, to restore an equality between the supply and demand for ships for purely commercial purposes.

During all these years Norway expects to continue gathering in huge profits, dwindling, perhaps, as time progresses, but gradually reaching a satisfactory normal, without any violent shock and with the Norwegians finally the world's second nation as traders on the seas. The recent influx of cash money has had its effect in all lines. The shipping trade has felt it most but mining, manufacturing and even the line of industries have been enormously stimulated. The average of the big new company profits is about 100 per cent. Including the small companies, the countries have been able to furnish adequate fuel supply. The coal of the Spitzbergen coal mines has been begun with the new coal furnished by the belligerents, on a large scale.

Spitzbergen, which seems in the United States like almost the last place on earth, is mentioned in Christianity as if it were no more remote than Alaska seems to Seattle. The coal mined there is declared to be the best quality bituminous and with it the Norwegians speak of making their country, in the near future, one of the biggest manufacturing nations of the world.

Has the Norwegian workingman received a fair share of the war profits? No, Norwegians generally declare that the belligerents' money has gone into few hands. Still, they say their country's workers are better paid than those of any other country in Europe. They are hopeful that a better adjustment between the classes is not far distant. A concrete reason why Sweden and Denmark have not gained as much from the war as has Norway unquestionably lies in the fact that Norway possesses the one thing needed to take advantage of the situation, ships, and that Sweden and Denmark did not.

Aside from this the Norwegians appear to have been better business men than either Swedes or Danes. They saw their chance and grabbed it, grabbed it out of the other Scandinavian countries' hands.

"TIZ" PUTS JOY IN SORE ACHING FEET

How "Tiz" Gets Its Effect

Ah, what relief. No more aching feet, no more burning feet, no more swollen, aching, tender, weary feet. No more soreness in corns, callouses, bunions.

No matter what ails your feet or what under the sun you've tried without getting relief, just use "Tiz." "Tiz" is the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet. "Tiz" cures your foot trouble so you'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never, never hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more foot misery, no more agony from corns, callouses or bunions.

Get a 25-cent box at any drug store or department store and get instant relief. Wear smaller shoes. Just once try "Tiz." Get a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents. Think of it.

FIRST DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN, OR GAS ON STOMACH

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking Tonicine Tablets.

People with weak stomachs should take Tonicine Tablets occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, acid risings, gas on stomach or belching of undigested food, headaches, dizziness or a sick stomach, and besides what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking Tonicine Tablets.

Go to your drug store and get a box of Tonicine Tablets, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are no germs in your any more bad nights and uncomfortable days for you. Tonicine is the food you eat and make you feel like the best worth living.
